A survey on Czechoslovakian (and Oriental?) rug production.
One in a series on Slovakian textile industry and handicrafts.
AB: A modern work in CZECH !!! +++++ Interesting, despite the language barrier. Most of the items illustrated have not been seen in print before which is to be expected, as so many were sourced in what was then Czechoslovakia. Considering the fact that the whole is printed on matt paper, it must be said that the colour printing has been very successful. The shorter first half of the book deals with rugs in general. Of the 60 illustrations, 57 are in colour. The second, longer, half deals more with weaving techniques and has 145 illustrations (62 in colour, 34 in monochrome, and 49 line). The book also has a bibliography, a glossary, two maps, and a further four full pages of illustrations (1/1 bw, and 7/3 colour).

A series of papers on the so-called Salting carpets by various authors (presented at the ICOC VIII in Philadelphia, 1996).
Until the early 20th century, these carpets were attributed to 16th and 17th century Persia. According to the extraordinary freshness of (sometimes quite harsh) colours, they were attributed from many authors (like Erdmann, Kurt and in the V&A catalog) to 19th century Anatolia (Hereke).
The catalog gives a mass of evidence that the earlier attribution was correct.

 An attempt to establish classical / antique silk rugs from Persia (or Turkey) as solid investment and protection against inflation. Rugs are categorized into a rating system from level 1 (Merchandise) to level 7.II (before 1500 Super Wealth). The pieces show mostly antique Persian carpets (with a few Anatolian), often from famous collections like Dole, Mayorkas, Perez and are astronomically priced from 100,000 to 10.800,000 Swiss Francs. The most expensive pieces are shown on fold-out plates.

A survey (dissertation) which illuminates this period of Persian carpet weaving, after the brilliant Safavid era with its glorious examples of carpet art and before the European revitalization of the Persian rug industry around 1875. In contrast to most former experts and scholars - who stated a considerable decline - the author demonstrates that there has always been a vivid rug production with pleasant examples (often endless small pattern designs), not influenced by Western tastes, by presenting extant examples (from auction houses, the international rug market and his own stock) and examining Persian literally sources and (Western) travel accounts. The survey makes it apparent that the Persian carpet always kept its important role in Persian everyday life. Typical designs of these often large format pieces are lattice, Herati, Harshang, garden carpets and afshan.

 RBS: The Seirafian workshop in Isfahan was one of the best carpet producers in that city. It was started by Haj Agha Reza Seirafian in 1939, and was famous for designs, material, dyes and weavers; the business was continued by his son, who is the author of this book. One of his rugs is reported to have 1260 knots per square inch. The text has sections on Seirafian's history, the history of Persian carpets focusing on classical carpets, dyes and wool, and advice on buying carpets. The illustrations are of complex-design Persian carpets.

Introduction essay:

- Vok, Ignazio: The collection

34 flatweaves are attributed to the Caucasus (including East-Anatolia and North-West Persia), 73 to Northwest, West, Central and South Persia. Caucasian pieces are of different types and techniques (kilims, silehs, sumakhs, zilis etc). Most flatweaves are attributed to the 19th century. Some Persian flatweaves are dated before or around 1800. For some pieces a photo shows details. Each flatweave is described by Vok, Ignazio and Sadighi, Hamid. Structural Analysis by Hawkes, Karin.

Detailed discussion of medieval Swedish (Scandinavian) soft furnishings which fall into two groups: I from the early middle ages (11th-early 14th centuries) and II (mid-14th century to mid 16th centuries) which "differ in technique, form and patterning". The study begins with a list of surviving medieval soft furnishings in the Nordic countries. Under the headline: The structure of the Material are presented the different woven techniques used for this purpose; soumak, brocaded tabby, type 'krabbasnår', type 'dukagång' and 'opphämta', tablet weaving and picked up double cloth. The differences in technique during the early and the later medieval period are discussed as well as the geographic distribution. In a chapter called: The Function of the Material, a comparative study is made between the terminology in eastern and western Scandinavia, the aim being to establish an adequate terminology. In a postscript some carbon-14 datings of the Skog and Överhogdal wall-hangings are discussed.

London: Thames & Hudson, 2020, English; 400 pp.; hard; 28.5x22.5cm; ca. 400 color (with details); several figures/photos; line drawings; some maps; Fair-Good; most with desc.; several with TechAnal.

Documentation of mostly 9th to 15th century Islamic textiles/textile fragments, divided by function, extant state (fragments), techniques supplemented by a set of (often quite earlier) West Chinese textiles (2nd to 14th centuries). Most pieces were found in the caves of Samangan (Northern Afghanistan).

Chapters:

1. Clothing and accoutrements (Cat. No. 1-38): garments, accessories, caps, pouches, shawl, veil, sashes
 2. Patterned fragments (39-231) by design like stripes, chequers, zigzags, palmettes, vine-scrolls, birds and fantastic creatures, geometric and floral patterns, calligraphic decoration, inscribed garment fragments, incomplete motifs
 3. Patterned textiles in different techniques (232-310), block-printed and resist-dyed textiles, monochrome designs, kilim, tapestry and felt fragments
 4. Chinese textiles from the silk road (311-336) including embroidered shoes.
- In total a large (and often quite colorful) collection of very varied designs, not often seen in other publications of this subject.

AB: The Swedes were involved in very thorough scientific expeditions across the north of China, with which many associate the name of Dr. Sven Hedin whose first expedition to Turkestan was in 1901. The multitude of artefacts discovered have since been spread across the world and Sylwan had occasion to undertake research on these in London, Delhi, and elsewhere. In addition to the usual prelims with a full page map based on Bergman's, and a brief appendix with four drawings. The actual texts divide into two parts: p. 21: "THE FINDS", and p.92: "DISCUSSION". The former has four sections: [1] The Edsen-gol district [2] The Lop-nor region [3] Some tailoring and other details, and [4] Wool and vegetable materials and has three further maps. The later has 9 sections: [1] General observations [2] Plain silks [3] Silk crepe and silk gauze [4] Figured silk damasks [5] Polychrome silk fabrics [6] Colouring, dyes, and dyeing [7] Weaving: looms and methods [8] Ancient Chinese terms for textiles [9] Cleaning of silks and articles of silk There are 100 drawings numbered 1-49 in the first section, and 50-100 in the second. The plates (28 pp. coated paper) are at the back: 3 plates (1-3, with facing page of descriptions) are in colour and show 18 items in full scale, and 23 plates (4-27) show ca. 87 in monochrome. There is neither a bibliography nor an index.

IV. Related Subjects

V. Appendices

V.1. Anthologies (compilation of articles)

For any categorized bibliography, the treatment of anthologies (compilation of several articles, often on different subjects and from different authors) is a difficult issue. From a book collector's perspective it seems justified to list as many anthologies as possible as entities and to 'disaggregate' only a few publications into their single articles.

To simplify searching for particular books (and their articles included) you find here a categorized list of anthologies with their particular 'treatment'.

There are several (series of) anthologies (books and magazines) which are listed under a specific category with all their relevant articles, even not all their contents fit into this category. Usually the articles are not listed again in their correct category:

1. Magazines (with their category)

Bulletin de Liaison du Centre International d'Étude des Textiles Anciens (CIETA): 0. Magazines + many articles (1960-) are listed individually

Carpet Collector: [Magazines / Periodicals] + most articles are listed individually

Ghereh: [Magazines / Periodicals] + most articles are listed individually

Hali: [Magazines / Periodicals] + most articles are listed individually

Heimtex: [Magazines / Periodicals] + many articles are listed individually

Journal of Indian textile history: [Textiles India/Pakistan]

Oriental Rug Review: [Magazines / Periodicals] + many/most articles are listed individually

Textile Museum Journal: [Rugs General]

Textile Museum Workshop Notes: [Textiles General]

Textile Society of America: [Textiles General]

Weltkunst: [Magazines / Periodicals] + several articles are listed individually

2a. Book Series (focusing on oriental rugs and textiles)

Hali Annual: [Rugs General]

Oriental Carpet and Textile Studies (OCTS): [Rugs General], except for OCTS V/2 [Rugs Persia]

Turkmenenforschung: [Rugs Central Asia] (all issues known to me are listed with their contents, even not all include articles/books on Central Asian weavings)

2b. Anthologies with only one article fitting into this bibliography

These publications are usually listed / sorted according to the author / title of the single article.

2c. Books with a focus (put into a particular category, even not all contributions fit into this category)

For most publications the relevant articles are listed within this entry.

V.3. List of Names with Different Spellings

Most different spellings result from different as not definite transliterations of authors from countries with non-Latin script, in addition from specific letters (not included in the English alphabet) and from former girl's names.

There are web-sites for standardisation of names proposing a specific spelling. Unfortunately this offers often a completely new/unfrequent spelling (like: Careva, Elena, for Tsareva, Elena), so I resigned to use it (and wrote the names according the publication).

Authors with different spellings of their names are listed here:

Azadi, Siawosch Ulrich = Azadi, Siawosch = Azadi, Siawosh = Āzādī, Siyāvush = Azadi, Siavosh

Balpınar, Belkis = Acar, Belkis = Acar, Belkis = Acar Balpınar, Belkis = Acar Balpınar, Belkis = Balpınar, Belkis = Balpınar, Belkis = Balpınar, Belkis

V.4. Standardisation / Abbreviation

Some (proper) nouns are spelled quite differently like Qashqa'i or Bakhtiari.
To simplify searching for particular topics, I tried to use a standardised spelling (even I may not have chosen the most appropriate spelling) for the following names in the item description (the spelling in the title or chapter is reproduced without changes, of course):

Tribes: Arabachi, Bakhtiari, Baluchi, Bijar, Kyrgyz / Kyrgyzstan, Luri, Qashqa'i, Sarouk, Saryk, Shahsavan, Turkoman, Uzbek / Uzbekistan, Yomut, Yörük.

Dynasties: Abbasid, Buyid (not: Bouyid), Sasanian

Places: Antinoë, Iparművészeti Műzeum, Budapest = Iparművészeti Museum, Budapest = Museum of Applied Arts, Budapest; Isfahan, Khorasan, Paotou, Rayy (instead of: Ravy), TIEM, Topkapi Palace, Varamin

Products: chuval, gol (göl, gul, gül), khorjin, Tiraz, Tulu

Other: ICOC I, ICOC II, ICOC III, ICOC IV etc.

Abbreviations:

A) Magazines/Institutions/Names/rug specific terms

CIETA: Bulletin de Liaison du Centre International d'Étude des Textiles Anciens

HT: Heimtex

ICOC: International Conference on Oriental Carpets

M.F.: Michael Franses (often in Hali reviews)

OCTS: Oriental Carpet and Textile Studies

ORR: Oriental Rug Review

R.P.: Robert Pinner (often in Hali reviews)

TMJ: Textile Museum Journal

W.S.: Wilfried Stanzer

B) General abbreviations:

[A]: article

[AUC]: auction catalog

bw (black/white);

conf.: conference

et al. (et alii): and others

exh.: exhibition

[M]: magazine

[MS]: magazine – single issue

NS: New Series (also: N.F. = N. S. = Neue Folge)

OPE: Other printings and editions

p.: page; pp.: pages

prev.: preview

rev.: review

V.5 Differences between patches and versions

The bibliography will be revised and enlarged continuously.

This means:

- faults will be corrected immediately (like misspellings, inaccuracies like double numbering etc.)

If major corrections seem necessary - like a new entry number for TCe-201, which was allocated twice - the former "wrong" number is listed in the entry additionally.

The same will be true if another categorisation for an entry seems more appropriate.

Usually the entry number will always keep the same, even if the change of an author's name spelling means another sequence of this entry (like TN-117: Abu Omar, Abed Al-Samih with its former spelling: Omar, Abed Al-Samih Abu).

Also small additions are included continuously, like:

- reviews
 - additional contents in the header or in the item description (like number of color plates or number of copies)
 - other editions in the OPE-section
- and similar.

So there might be slightly different versions for the same edition, patch number like 1.1.

Please note: New entries are added only to new editions (like 2.0), but not to new patches.

V.6 People who have contributed to the development of this bibliography

The following rug (book) aficionados (in alphabetical order) have contributed to the expansion of this bibliography by sending me corrections, additional information and/or additional entries. I would like to thank them for their valuable support.
